

The Canada-United States-Mexico Agreement

This agreement is scheduled to enter into force on July 1, 2020, replacing the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

Certifying The Origin Of Goods

In order to claim preferential tariff treatment under the Canada-United States-Mexico Agreement (CUSMA), a certification of origin is required. The certification of origin has no prescribed format, but instead consists of a set of minimum data elements, which are set out in Annex 5-A of the Origin Procedures Chapter \(Chapter 5 of the CUSMA\). An example of a valid certification of origin containing the minimum data elements can be found below.

The certification of origin may be completed by either the exporter, producer or importer of the goods for the purpose of certifying that a good being exported from the territory of another party qualifies as an originating good. It may be provided on an invoice or any other document, and may be completed and submitted electronically including with an electronic or digital signature.

An importer is required to have the certification of origin in its possession at the time that the importer makes a claim for preferential tariff treatment. The importer must provide the certification of origin to the CBSA upon request, as stipulated in Article 5.4\(1\)\(c\) of the CUSMA (Obligations Regarding Importations).

The certifier must maintain records to substantiate that the good is an originating good, including information and documents such as bills of lading, invoices, and customs control documents. The certification of origin can include all data elements as listed in a single, separate electronic or physical document, or all data elements as added to or found in an invoice or any other document.

Example of a valid certification of origin

The Old Sod Shanty, a Canadian western apparel store located in Alberta, will be importing multiple shipments of two different leather belt models (model "Western King" and model "Western Queen"), which are manufactured in and exported from El Paso, Texas, US. These will be imported over a blanket period from September 1, 2020, to August 31, 2021. The producer and exporter of the two leather belt models, Belt-R-Up Company, has completed and signed the valid CUSMA certification of origin below. The Old Sod Shanty, as the importer, has the certification of origin in its possession.
